Coding MI Using the Motivational Interviewing Treatment Integrity Code (MITI)

an interactive live webinar experience with Bob Jope, LMHC

member of the Motivational Interviewing Network of Trainers (MINT)

One of the challenges in adopting Motivational Interviewing (MI) in agencies and programs is ensuring ongoing fidelity without repeated investment in outside expertise to assess MI performance by staff. The Motivational Interviewing Treatment Integrity Code (MITI) is a comprehensive assessment tool that allows users to reliably evaluate the quality of MI conversations, even if the users have not themselves been trained in MI. For MI-trained users, training with the MITI has been found to improve the quality and sophistication of their MI practice. Participants in this experience will work with the latest version of the MITI and receive extensive instruction and practice in its use.

Overall Goal: Participants will develop the capacity to use the MITI to evaluate the use of MI in live and recorded conversations.

Target Audience: Helping professionals, including social workers, mental health counselors, recovery coaches, rehabilitation counselors, and others; quality improvement professionals and other administrators who may assess MI use.

Learning Level: Introductory through Advanced

Learning Objectives: Participants will develop the ability to:

1. List the behavioral categories described in the MITI and identify their use in conversational examples.
2. Explain the global measures used in the MITI and use them to reliably rate conversations.
3. Provide feedback to MI users in a strengths-based manner consistent both with MITI guidelines and the spirit of Motivational Interviewing.
