

Motivational Interviewing clinical Training

Motivational interviewing is a form of collaborative conversation for strengthening a person's own motivation and commitment to change. It is a person-centered counseling style for addressing the common problem of ambivalence about change by paying particular attention to the language of change. It is designed to strengthen an Individual's motivation for and movement toward a specific goal by eliciting and exploring the person's own reasons for change within an atmosphere of acceptance and compassion.

Craig Anderson is a Licensed Clinical Social Worker and a Certified Prevention Specialist. He has worked in the human services field for over 10 years. His experience has given him wonderful opportunities in direct services at the clinical level, program administration, research, teaching academically and training. As a prevention specialist he values the need to find macro level answers to the behavioral issues we face as a society. As a social worker he recognizes the importance of taking an individualistic look at how those issues affect each of us. Craig was introduced to Motivational Interviewing early on in his career and is a member of the Motivational Interviewing Network of Trainers (MINT). He's had the opportunity to utilize MI in clinical settings as well as in his various supervisory positions. Craig graduated from the University of Utah and recently relocated to East Idaho where he lives with his family.

Craig trains for the Prevention Research Institute based out of Lexington KY. Through PRI he provides training for various human services entities in the States of Colorado, Maine, North Carolina, Indiana, Alaska, Georgia Utah, Montana and Tennessee, the US Coast Guard and the US Army. He has trained at conferences such as the CADCA National Forum in Washington DC, the Utah Fall Conference on Substance Abuse and Prevention, The June School on Substance Abuse, The National Homeless Summit, The Behavioral Health Conference and has served as an invited panel member at the Governor's Health Summit in Salt Lake City. Craig has trained for various organizations such as Volunteers of America, Peer Court, the Salt Lake City Mayor's Coalition, the SPF-SIG Coalition, and student body leaderships in various regions in the West. He has also presented numerous times as a guest speaker in academic settings for the University of Utah, Weber State University and Snow College.
